Pre-K students love having middle school volunteers help them in the classroom and on the playground. Here students are working hard on a holiday craft with their middle school friends. A Day on an Island with Dr. Christine Neville

Seven HES students in grades 5-8 had a singular opportunity to spend a day experiencing life on an island. These students have been working on a Maine Island Project since September and on November 15th, the group traveled to Islesboro on the early morning ferry, the Margaret Chase Smith. They were met by the Islesboro Central School van and toured through Dark Harbor on the way to the school, which is in a lovely building that was once a private mansion. Our students enjoyed a school tour, interviewed full time and commuting students, attended classes, and then had lunch with their new friends. Before returning to the ferry, they were treated to a tour of the island which took them from the town beach at the extreme southern end all the way to the northern end. Prior to this trip, these students researched one or two islands off the coast of Maine, read at least one novel about life on an island, created a brochure to advertise one of the islands, summarized the information, and are finalizing a slide presentation to share with their classmates.
